JMDC GUEST LECTURE SERIES

EBOLA : INTERNATIONAL PUBLIC HEALTH EMERGENCY

Prof. Dr. Shehla Naqvi JMDC Pediatrics Dept. on November 08, 2014, told that Ebola is a viral infection which causes severe disease; leading to multiorgan failure and death in 50 percent cases. The infection is caught by contact with a patient suffering from Ebola. Transmission can be prevented by using gloves, masks and protective clothing. Disease outbreak occurred in 2014 in 3 West African nations. It may take upto 3 weeks for disease to manifest after infection with fever. All visitors from Africa are being screened for Ebola at the airport. There is no specific cure or vaccine as yet. Ebola is being treated as an international public health emergency.

ROLE OF GALACTIN-3 IN HEART FAILURE

Dr. Satwat Hashmi, Asst. Prof., Dept. of Biological and Biomedical Sciences, AKUH, delivered this lecture on December 13, 2014. She said that Heart Failure is an emerging epidemic, so search for cardiac biomarkers to facilitate better clinical judgment for diagnosis and management of HF patients is crucial. Galectin-3 is a newer FDA approved biomarker. It is not only used for assessing prognosis of heart failure patients but can also serve as an early warning signal reflecting myocardial changes very early post myocardial infarction.

Q & A Session

Prof. Dr. Ashraf Kamar Uddin Chairperson & HOD Obstetrics & Gynecology

Q. How long have you been associated with JMDC?

A. Since Lady Dufferin Hospital was affiliated with JMDC for teaching Obstetrics and Gynecology, more than 12 years ago.

Q. What are your achievements?

A. It feels good to see students you have taught and junior doctors who have trained under you, now standing beside you as your colleagues. I have also been associated with two NGOs in establishing, non-profit hospitals in Karachi.

Q. Share your experience at JMCH.

A. I joined JMCH in 2012 after my retirement from Lady Dufferin hospital, originally for one year, but was asked to continue. This was a challenge, as it was not easy to make changes to start with. But with cooperation from the ED, Mr. Adnan Sohail, the changes started taking effect. New protocols were introduced. Audits and workshops were conducted. OPD facilities were improved giving the patients more confidence. The faculty was completed, resulting in a better working environment. Now the volume of work has more than doubled, the quality of care has improved resulting in a lower Caesarean section rate and lower perinatal and maternal morbidity, thanks also to the efforts of the Pediatric Department. Best of all we have a very friendly faculty, with competent junior doctors and nurses. Without them no change would be effective.

Q. In Pakistan how many female give importance to their health. If not, why do they neglect themselves.

A. Not many women will see a doctor unless there is a problem. In the lower socio-economic class, besides lack of education, financial restraints and family pressure, mostly mother in law, prevents her from deciding what to do.

Q. What would you like to do when you are not in hospital.?

A. Most babies like to come into this world at night, which is why obstetricians have a "sleep deficit". I use my free time to sleep it off. I love to travel, read books, knit or cook when the mood allows.

Q. Message for the young female doctors eager to go into Obstetrics & Gynecology

A. Do not go into this field unless you have compassion. If you do decide to take up Obstetrics & Gynecology then get trained properly. Aim for the top most position, because that is always empty.
